Divine Hunger and Cannibal Monsters

Cannibalism as a Cultural System

Peggy Reeves Sanday

Peggy Reeves Sanday presents a new approach to understanding ritual cannibalism. She shows that cannibalism is intimately connected both with the constructs by which the origin and continuity of life is understood and assured from one generation to the next, and with the way in which that understanding is used to control the vital forces considered necessary for the reproduction of society.

Religion in Context

Cults and Charisma

I.M. Lewis

Stressing the importance of rigorous social contextualization, Lewis analyzes such seemingly disparate phenomena as spirit possession, witchcraft, cannibalism, and shamanism, which are usually attributed to separate cults and even cultures, revealing the inter-connections both between them and with the universal world religions, such as Islam and Christianity.

Space, Text and Gender

An Anthropological Study of the Marakwet of Kenya

Henrietta Moore

In this major anthropological study of the Marakwet, Dr. Moore focuses on the relationship between the organization of household space and gender relations, and on the ways that relationship is changing as a result of wage labor and education. She combines insights of Geertz, Ricoeur, and Foucault with material drawn from Marxist and literary critical approaches to develop a new theoretical perspective.

The Social Life of Things

Commodities in Cultural Perspective

Editor: Arjun Appadurai

The contributors to this volume examine how things are sold and traded and discuss a wide range of goods – from oriental carpets to human relics – to illuminate the ways in which people find value in things and things give value to social relations. They reveal that beneath the seeming infinitude of human wants, and the apparent multiplicity of material forms, there in fact lie complex, but specific, social, and political mechanisms that regulate taste, trade, and desire.

The Anthropological History of Andean Politics

Editors: John V. Murra, Nathan Wachtel, and Jacques Revel

This collection of essays by Andean, European, and United States Scholars was originally published in the Paris journal Annales as one of the special issues of their "historical anthropologies." It brings together the perspectives of archaeology, history, and anthropology to present a complex view of Andean societies over various millennia.

Comparative Studies in Society and History is a forum for presentation and discussion of new research into problems of change and stability that recur in human societies through time or in the contemporary world. It sets up a working alliance between specialists in all branches of the social sciences and humanities. Debate and review articles bring the general reader in touch with current findings and issues.

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

Contributions may be descriptive, analytical or theoretical. Any article not in itself comparative may be accepted if it lends itself to comment that will place it in comparative perspective. Correspondence with the editors prior to the submission of articles will help to enable them to obtain such comment or a companion study. Emphasis in comparative studies may be either on similarities or, if these are significant enough and call for some recasting of generalizations, on differences. All contributions and editorial correspondence should be sent to the Editors, Comparative Studies in Society and History, Department of History, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48109.

Two copies of each contribution, preferably accompanied by a stamped, addressed envelope, should be submitted. Both text and footnotes should be clearly typed with double spacing and wide margins; footnotes should appear on separate pages at the end of the article. Illustrations may be included by arrangement with the editors.
