

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

RICHARD A. BERK is a Professor of Sociology and Director of the Social Process Research Institute at the University of California, Santa Barbara. He has published widely in the fields of family violence, sociology of law, and evaluation research. Ongoing projects include an evaluation of local efforts to reduce wife battery among offenders who have come to the attention of the criminal justice system.

SARAH FENSTERMAKER BERK is an Associate Professor of Sociology at the University of California, Santa Barbara. She has published in a number of areas related to gender. Her most recent book, The Gender Factory: The Apportionment of Work in American Homes, is being published by Plenum early in 1985.

PHILIP L. DUBOIS is an Associate Professor of Political Science and Assistant Vice Chancellor of Academic Programs at the University of California, Davis. He is the author of From Ballot to Bench: Judicial Elections and the Quest for Accountability (1980) and numerous articles on the subject of state judicial selection.

ARIE FREIBERG is a Senior Lecturer in Law at Monash University in Australia. He has written on the law and practice of sentencing, and his current research interest is the sociology of sanctions.

ROBERT A. KAGAN is a Professor of Political Science at the University of California, Berkeley. In addition to articles on state supreme courts and the U.S. Supreme Court, he has written Regulatory Justice and (with Eugene Bardach) Going By the Book: The Problem of Regulatory Unreasonableness, as well as several articles on regulatory enforcement.

DONILEEN R. LOSEKE holds a Ph.D. in Sociology from the University of California, Santa Barbara. She is interested in violence against women and is currently teaching at Skidmore College.

PHYLLIS J. NEWTON is a graduate student in Sociology at the University of California, Santa Barbara. Her general research interest is in the area of victimization of women. She is currently working on a domestic violence project and a project on women's fear of crime.

PAT O'MALLEY is a Senior Lecturer in Sociology and Legal Studies at LaTrobe University in Australia and has published widely on the sociology of law. His latest book is Law, Capitalism and Democracy.

RAYMOND PATERNOSTER is an Assistant Professor in the Institute for Criminal Justice and Criminology at the University of Maryland. He is currently involved in research on racial discrimination in the imposition of capital punishment, the structure of public opinion on capital punishment, and the role of perceived risk in social control.